you look very upset, what's wrong with you?

I'm really angry with my parents. I don't want to talk to them anymore. They don't accept me as who I am. When I was a child, my parents forced me to study hard all the time. They never cared about my own thoughts and my truly wants.

in my opinion, you'd better communicate with them, as you know, the starting point of what your parents do is totally for you. There is no denying that your parents have more experience than you in life. Consequently you are supposed to think about your parents' suggestions sometimes

I'm not sure about that, but I think they're supposed to listen to me more often. Maybe we have a deep generation gap between us.

well, actually there is a generation gap between many parents and children and it's quite normal you should take efforts to bridge the generation gap . Dialogue and two-way communication are two of the best tools for parents and children to bridge the generational divide.

I got your point. You mean I should accept and embrace the difference between my parent' s values and mine. I should learn to see things from a different perspective. On the other hand, my parents should also try to understand me with patience and respect. What shall I do if my parents still force me to do something I dislike?

well first of all, you can tell your parents your thought, let them know that you are a adult now,
not a child anymore . you already can make your own decision,
and shoulder the responsibility, it is you that who responsible for your life. your parents will understand you i f you have a face-to-face talk, because they used to be a child , they have experienced the same period as you

I think you are pretty right. I' ll keep your advice in mind. Thanks very much.

Caveat emptor

“Never Give a Sucker an Even Break” is a 1941 Universal Pictures comedy film starring W. C. Fields. The film is presented as a “real life” story, with W. C. Fields, Franklin Pangborn, and Gloria Jean playing themselves.

At Hollywood's Esoteric Pictures studios, Fields is seen admiring a billboard advertising his previous film, The Bank Dick (银行妙探), and encounters various hecklers (诘问者) and minor calamities. His doting niece, Gloria Jean, is on her way to rehearse (排练) some songs at the studio, where she demonstrates her classically trained soprano (女高音). Fields himself is also there to pitch a script to Franklin Pangborn.

Upon release, The New York Times said, “We are not yet quite sure that this latest opus is even a movie—no such harum-scarum collection of song, slapstick and thumbnail sketches has defied dramatic law in recent history. We are more certain that at its worst the film is extravagantly (挥霍无度的) bad, no less that William Claude is wonderful,” further stating, “Yes, some parts of the film you will find incomprehensibly (费解地) silly. Probably you also will laugh your head off.”

Caveat Emptor

The Market Tour

Caveat emptor /ˌkævɛɪt ˈɛmptɔːr/ is Latin for "Let the buyer beware"[1] (from caveat, "may he beware", a subjunctive form of cavēre, "to beware" + ēmptor, "buyer"). Generally, caveat emptor is the contract law principle that controls the sale of real property after the date of closing, but may also apply to sales of other goods. The phrase caveat emptor arises from the fact that buyers typically have less information about the good or service they are purchasing, while the seller has more information. The quality of this situation is known as 'information asymmetry (不对称)'. Defects in the good or service may be hidden from the buyer, and only known to the seller.

A common way that information asymmetry between seller and buyer has been addressed is through a legally-binding warranty (保障), such as a guarantee of satisfaction. But without such a safeguard (保卫) in place the ancient rule applies, and the buyer should beware.

cyberspace ['saibərspeɪs] 网络空间；赛博空间

cyberspace tort 网络侵权

e.g.on principles for territorial jurisdiction of cyberspace tort ., 网络侵权案件地域管辖的基本原则.

Cyberspace is "the notional environment in which communication over computer networks occurs." The word became popular in the 1990s when the uses of the Internet, networking, and digital communication were all growing dramatically and the term "cyberspace" was able to represent the many new ideas and phenomena that were emerging.

So did wealthy Norse mothers who had poor women foster their children, and European aristocrats who employed wet nurses (奶妈) .

Ancient history

In ancient Rome, well-to-do households would have had wet-nurses (Latin nutrices, singular nutrix) among their slaves and freedwomen (自由妇女), but some women were wet-nurses by profession, and the Digest of Roman law even refers to a wage dispute for wet-nursing services (nutricia). The landmark known as the Columna Lactaria ("Milk Column") may have been a place where wet-nurses could be hired. It was considered admirable for upperclass women to breastfeed (用母乳喂养) their own children, but unusual and old-fashioned in the Imperial era (帝国时代). Even women of the working classes or slaves might have their babies nursed, and the Roman-era Greek gynecologist (妇科医生) Soranus offers detailed advice on how to choose a wet-nurse.
